NATIONAL NEWS

Careers statutory guidance updated

Statutory guidance has been updated, requiring schools to extend their careers guidance provision to all students from Year 7 – previously Year 8. Another update will be in the Autumn.

John Lewis to hire 10,000 Christmas staff

John Lewis is recruiting 10,000 Christmas workers across the country. The group has also announced it will provide free food to all partners and temp workers from October to January.

Record low in youth unemployment

ONS figures show that youth unemployment has reached a record low with an estimated 239,000 16-24 year olds not in education, employment or training. The figure for men (167,000) was more than double for women in the same situation (71,000).

£7.6m to help 2,000 adults with autism into work

A new £7.6m government initiative has been launched to provide funding to support adults with learning disabilities, autism or both to move into and maintain employment.

Vocational training can offer some of the best paths to success

City & Guilds research found that 40% of young people are planning to attend university after finishing their A Levels. However, economic modellers Lightcast found that only 30% of jobs in the UK require a degree. Vocational training and apprenticeships offer an alternative career pathway. Interestingly, the London School of Economics reported that the gap in earnings between apprentices and graduates may have reversed, with apprentices earning up to £7k more in their 20's than graduates.

GCSE grades show a regional divide

Just under a third of GCSE grades 7 and above were in London, compared to a fifth in the North East and Yorkshire and the Humber. Overall 73.2% of GCSEs were marked at 4 and above this year, down from 77.1% in 2021.

Apprenticeships still overlooked by young people

Research from BDO found there are still misconceptions around apprenticeships and young people. Some findings include:

- 51% of people aged between 18-24 still believe that you are more likely to earn more with a degree than with an apprenticeship
- 62% said their school or college encouraged them to go to university rather than apply for an apprenticeship. This figure was higher (70%) for those based in Greater London.
- 55% said their parents would prefer them to go to university over an apprenticeship. This increased for those from a Black (71%) or Asian (63%) heritage.

CIPD Labour Market Outlook Summer 2022

Some findings from the quarterly CIPD Labour Market Outlook:

- 47% of employers have hard-to-fill vacancies – most common in Education, Transport and Storage, and the Voluntary sector
- Employment intentions remains positive across industries but are particularly high in Information and Communication, Construction, Business Services and Admin and Support Services.

Superdrug and Savers pledge to provide thousands of jobs for young people by 2030

A.S. Watson Group has pledged to offer 200,000 job opportunities for young people globally – with 25,000 jobs across the UK in Superdrug and Savers by 2030. The Group has also announced training and coaching in order to build an inclusive society.

The best jobs for hybrid work in the UK

Office management software specialist ECI Software Solutions analysed 220,000 LinkedIn job postings to see which professions have adapted the fastest to the demand for hybrid work. Civil Engineering jobs topped the chart with other jobs such as Business Analyst, Graphic Designer and Barrister.

Early Careers Survey 2022

Some key findings from the Early Careers Survey 2022 by Prospects shows:

- School students were particularly reliant on their families for careers advice (65%) but university students also turned to their families too (40%)
- 79% of student respondents completed some form of work experience in 2021
- One in ten students didn't do an apprenticeship because their parents were against it
- Image below shows the top three sources of careers advice.
